 Aborígenes The Aborigines of Australia have the longest cultural history in the world. They originated in the Ice Age. Early Aboriginal society consisted of around five hundred tribes and each had its own territory and dialect. Their culture existed in rock art, cave paintings, and engraving of plants, animals, and ceremonies. Aboriginal tribes hunted kangaroos, snakes, and emus. They also gathered fruit, roots, honey, and seeds. They walked long distances and they often did not wear clothes. In winter, they would wear protective coats of kangaroo fur. British colonizers were the first to settle in Australia. They took the land from the Aborigine people. Today, Aborigines have adapted to Australian culture. Some family groups live in remote areas where they try to maintain traditional hunting, food gathering and ceremonial practices. However, communication and transport have changed their lifestyles. Now they wear modern clothes and use technology.
